LIBATION, amongst the Greeks and Romanes, was an official part of clean families. It was also per- formed alone, as a drink offering, by way of procuring the protection and throwor of the gods, in the ordinary affairs of life. Librations according to the different nature of the gods in honour of whom they were made, modified of different liquids, but none we the most usual. The wine offered to the gods are al- ways unmixed with water. We meet with libations of water, libations of heavy libations of milk, all libations of oil, theirs are called waves to .. The li- bation was made with a ferious department and foloma prayer. The facilities of libations, after it had been tatled by the greift, and handed to the hydraulers, was poured upon the victim. At entertainments, a little wine was generally poured out of the cup, be- therefore began to consider, to those their gra- gratitude to the gods for the blofings they enjoyed.

LIBELI _(thlolisi Emmais)_, taken in its largest and more effective fuels, figliative writing, pictures, the likes, of an immond or illegal tendency, but, in a peculiar lenfe, is ufet to denote a malicious dehuma tion of any person, and especially a magnificate, made public by either printing, writing, type, or pictures, in order to provoke him to wrath, or expole him to public hautet, contempt, and ridiculite. The direct tendency of these labels is the breach of the public peace, by filring up the objects of them to revenge and perhaps to bloodified. The communication of a libed in any one person is a publication in the eye of the law: and therefore the finding an abusive private letter to a man is so much a land a if is were equally printed, for frequently reads to breach of the piece.

With regard to labels in general, there are, as in many other cases, two remarks, one by judgment, and another by editor. The former for the _public of_ fences for every libel has a tendency to break the pieces, or provoke others offence is the fans whether the matter contained he true or fully, and therefore the defendants on an indicment for publishing a libek, is not allowed to allegte to get the of it by way of justification. But in the remedy by rection on the cafe, which is to repair the party in de mages for the injury have him, the defendant may, as for words friokes, justify the truth of the fields, and show that the plaintiff has received no injury at all. In a civil action, then, a libed mail appears to be fairly, as well as famduous jar, if the charge be true, the plaintiff has received no private injury, and has no ground to demand a comportation for him- felf, whatever offers it may be against the public peace: and therefore, upon a civil action, the truth of the sacrifice may be pleaded in bar of the futi. But, is a criminal proof, the tendency which all libels have to create amigotities, and to dit disturb the public peace, is the folk condication of the law. And therefore, in both professionals, the only points to be considered are, firly, the making or publishing of the book or writing and, secondly, whether the matter to the criminals, and, if both their point are a gainfit the defendant, the offence againfit the public is complete. The punishment of fault-holders, for either making, repetizing, nothing, or publishing the libel, is a fine, and fich corporal puniment as the court in its allocation fluid infield, regarding the quantity of defense, and the quality of the officials. By this law of the twelve tables at Rome, libels, which affect the reputation of auditors, were made a capital of fener's but, before the steps of August, the punith- ment because corporal only. Under the emperor Va- tentain it was again made capital, nor way to write, but to publish, or even to one defraying them. Our law, in this and many other respects, corportiss rather with the middle age of Roman juniprocency, when liberty, learning, and humanity, were in their full vigour, than with the credil edits that were elita- bilind in the trade and U+8870 ad ages of the ancient decrements, or the latter expressors.
